Rowmark Achieves UL Safety Approval on Select Acrylic Sheet (PMMA) Product Lines

Textures™, Lacquers, Slickers, Ultra-Mattes Front and Reverse are now UL certified.

Rowmark is pleased to announce that our acrylic (Polymethyl Methacrylate or PMMA) sheet products, including all colors in our Textures™, Lacquers, Slickers and Ultra-Mattes Front and Reverse lines, recently received Underwriters Laboratories (UL) safety certification in the United States and Canada.

UL is a global independent safety science company with over a century of experience in strategically developing standards to measure and validate businesses' safety, performance, environmental health and sustainability within a wide variety of industries. UL certification means that Rowmark is continuing its commitment to safety, product performance and quality for customers through compliance to UL's strict safety standards and adherence to an extensive certification process.

Rowmark's select acrylic (PMMA) product lines have passed UL's strict flammability testing under the UL94 standard and horizontal burning (HB) flame rating. UL94 certifies that a plastic material is approved for use in parts for devices and appliances based on flammability testing, while HB approval indicates that a product performs within UL's specified burn rate maximum in a horizontal position.

The following symbol affirms that a particular product or component is officially recognized as being UL certified:

This symbol appears on the upcoming 2013 Rowmark Color Chart adjacent to all of our UL certified product lines, and will soon be added to Rowmark.com.

Traditionally, yellow printed cards were used to certify that particular components or products were UL approved. Now, all yellow cards are available in a convenient electronic format via UL's online certifications directory at http://database.ul.com/cgi-bin/XYV/template/LISEXT/1FRAME/index.html.
